

Using the Computers

To use a public computer, you must first sign in with a valid library card. Guest passes are available only for out-of-state visitors and first time users.

Librarians monitor computer use and set time limits so that everyone can reasonably share the computers.

More than one person may use the same computer, providing that they do not disturb others.

Printing is allowed at cost per page.

Information may be downloaded to personal storage devices.

Librarians do not provide assistance with the use of personal electronics.

The library is not responsible for damage to your storage device or personal computer, or for any loss of data; or for liability that may occur from using a library computer.

Librarians cannot fill out forms for the public or conduct personal/business transactions.

Basic computer skills are required. Classes are available.

The library does not provide typing services.

As with other library materials, restriction of a child's access to the Internet is the responsibility of the parent or legal guardian. Children ages 13 through 17 must have written parental permission on file. Children under 13 must be accompanied by a parent or caregiver.

If you fail to follow these guidelines, you may lose your library privileges and access to the library. Any apparent violations of the law will be reported to the police.

You May Not:

Use library computers for unauthorized access to the library's networks, computer systems, or any other network or computer system. (a)

Obstruct the work of others by using needlessly large amounts of system resources or by deliberately crashing any library computer system. (b)

View content unsuitable to an all-ages public setting. (b)

Attempt to damage computer equipment/software. (a)

Attempt to alter software configurations. (a)

Attempt to cause degradation of system performance. (a)

Attempt to install your own software on a library computer, or run any personal software. (b)
